Philosopher in Print

This month's 'Philosopher in Print' is grad student Bokai Yao. His paper titled, "Reflection Principles and Second-Order Choice Principles with Urelements", is now available in the April issue of the Annals of Pure and Applied Logic.

Abstract

We study reflection principles in Kelley-Morse set theory with urelements (KMU). We first show that First-Order Reflection Principle is not provable in KMU with Global Choice. We then show that KMU + Limitation of Size + Second-Order Reflection Principle is mutually interpretable with KM + Second-Order Reflection Principle. Furthermore, these two theories are also shown to be bi-interpretable with parameters. Finally, assuming the existence of a k^+ -supercompact cardinal in KMU, we construct a model of KMU + Second-Order Reflection Principle where Limitation of Size fails.

THE ELYSIAN CAFE

THE BAR OF LOST SOULS

Outside of space and time, outside of history, in a pocket dimension accessible from any time or place in human history, lies the Elysian Café. Found only by the fortunate chosen few, this bar will serve any beverage one can imagine, except the "three forbidden drinks" known only to the barkeep, Hesperus Cerberides.

PHILOSOPHER IN QUESTION: BLAKE ZIEGLER

Which three philosophers would you invite to the bar?

1. John Rawls
2. Robert Nozick
3. Peter Singer

What drink do you imagine each of them ordering?

1. Jack Daniels (Rawls)
2. Beer (Nozick)
3. Lots of Vodka (Singer - studies show drunkenness is associated with acceptance of utilitarian thinking!)

What topic would you wish to see them debate? Why?

While we would discuss the issues presented in their works, the conversation would mainly revolve around the major questions of life: Is the dress blue/black or white/goal? Do you hear Yanny or Laurel? Is a hot dog a sandwich? I think exposing them to what people write on Twitter, especially about their views, would be hilarious.

How does it all end?

Rawls goes home to write another book, Nozick starts a long thread on Twitter to rant, and Singer tries to remove meat from the bar's menu.
